English Essay

What can Trinidad and Tobago teach the world?

"Sweet, sweet T+T, O how I love up meh country. These are the words of David Ruedder's 'Trini to de Bone.' This country is like my great grandmother's well-known sugar-cake, sweet. Every morsel makes you wanting for more. Trinidad and Tobago is enriched with the best ingredients: beautiful flora and fauna, ~~an~~ exotic seas and simply it is one of the most picturesque landforms. Trinidad + Tobago is also made up of its own divine history, people and amazing culture so I suggest you sit back and take a taste of this sugarcake.

For us to describe Trinidad + Tobago we need to go back, way back, into the controversial depths of our history. There was Amerindians living on this land first before Columbus, an explorer, rediscovered our land. This then brought the Spanish influence and with it the African slaves. The British came and overthrew the Spanish. The East Indians, Portuguese and Chinese came as indentured labourers. There was also the Syrian Lebanese that ~~has~~ ~~is~~ ~~part~~ of the bubbling pot of sugars they call us "The rainbow people."

The thing that gives sugarcake its grit is the coconut, grated and it is times like these that I call the foundation. The foundation of our country is unity. United we stand whether it be in a goalless defeat in football or going by your Hindu friend for Divali. This is one of the lessons that if the world practiced these wouldn't be war. One of our country's watchwords is Tolerance and if, only if, the world could have our community effort. We are a community and is one of the few ~~communities~~ countries that still have that neighbour feel. There are some places that don't even have people who know their neighbours' names and in Trinidad + Tobago we are always there when you need a helping hand.

Our hospitality and love for each human being knows no bounds. In some countries, even other Caribbean islands you cannot just go by your friend's house and "bubble a pot" and make a little get-together. We "Trinis" always have a friendly smile and are truly proud of our accomplishments and our country's beauty. We love our country with its lush and rich flora and fauna. Trinidad and Tobago is filled with ~~an~~ amazing ~~things~~ plants that inspire awe and inspiration. Our seas form a picturesque wonder that will surely inspire even the great Michelangelo.

Trinidad and Tobago's people are die-hard supporters of their sports and anything that ~~these~~ ^{their} people partake of.

Trinidad and Tobago is an amazing country filled with rich culture, beauty and people. It is a lovely country that makes one sweet, sweet sugarcake. It smells fresh and savoury and this is one country that makes the saying, "Big things come in small packages" true to its word.
