The Royal Commonwealth Society statement on the UK General Election 2017 Result

Commenting on yesterday's General Election result in the UK, the Director of the Royal Commonwealth Society, Michael Lake, has said:

"It is our anticipation at the Society that, regardless of the UK's new political make-up, the Government remains recommitted to greater Commonwealth engagement and the resulting opportunities. Next year's Commonwealth Summit in the UK underscores this important prospect. The momentum is there and it should continue unhindered."
